EXPLANATORY NOTES:

* DANGEROUS BETTING RACE - Races I suggest you do no even consider win / place betting in. My profiling shows that these races largely favour the "market" and are very difficult to profit from backing any runner.

* I WANT TO BACK (++) - These horses have a profile that is clearly undervalued by the betting market. They are the standout value bets that my action is focused on and I recommend you back them too. Remember, they are not necessarily "good things", but horses that my experience and results suggest have a clear betting edge for punters. Keep your expectations of winning a specific bet in line with the price i.e. a $10 chance will only win 11%-12% of the time (10%+ POT) while a $2.50 chance will win 44%-48% in the long-term. Even a $1.70 chance will only win about 2 in 3 races.

* SOME APPEAL (+) - While they don't profile as standout value, these runners do have some characteristics that are appealing for betting. If your own analysis suggests you like these horses then you can use this indicator as extra confidence to bet. If you are seeking more action than the ++ horses and can shop around for good prices, these are the next level of horses I suggest you consider.

* I WANT TO LAY (XX) - These horses profile as significant long-term losers for punters, to such an extent that there is the potential to lay them for profit in the Betfair market. Generally I try to focus on runners $10 and less in the market, but even those above this price are still lay candidates.

* AVOID (x) - While they don't profile as significant long-term losers, these runners well in the market lack the positive characteristics needed to make a decent long-term profit. I don't necessarily recommend you lay these horses, but I certainly recommend that you do not back them! Plenty of punters will back them and they will win their share of races, but ultimately deliver a loss and slowly drain your betting bank.
